

Pathway planning

Grow

Pathway planning enables you to explore, identify, grow and evaluate learning and work pathways available and recognise opportunities available through your network of family and friends. It allows you to recognise connections in your life and the importance of persistence in the face of change.

My life right now

Instructions

Reflect on your life right now. Using the prompts below, provide responses in the 'Now' box (e.g. playing netball for health) and 'Developing' box (e.g. join a school group to get involved).

Identity and/or culture

- What is your understanding of your identity and/or culture?
- How are you connected to your culture?
- In what way do you feel your culture and/or identity is respected and valued?

Family and friends

Consider your relationships with family, friends and members of your community.

- How do you maintain positive relationships with others?

Health

Think about your physical health.

- How healthy do you feel?
- What exercise do you undertake?
- How healthy is your diet?

Learning

You learn through a variety of experiences within the classroom, the home and community.

- Are your individual learning needs being met?
- Think about your overall experience of school.
- Consider your academic achievement/grades/subjects. How do you think you are going?

Getting involved

- How are you involved in your school community?
- What involvement do you have in the community outside of school?
- How are you connecting with peers and groups through activities, face-to-face or online?
- What opportunities do you have to lead?
- How might you contribute to society?

Career exploration

What level of study is required?

The skills required to do a particular job are called work-related skills. During your career exploration activities consider the work-related skills you will need in your chosen work. Use myfuture.edu.au to research careers that interest you.

Career pathways

Research three careers that link to your strengths and interests.

My career portfolio

A career portfolio is a personal collection of materials that document learning, activities and achievements over a lifetime with everything gathered and organised in one place. A well-maintained career portfolio makes it easy to identify, and demonstrate relevant work capabilities, knowledge and experiences. It can be a collection of hard copies, though it is a good idea to develop a digital or e-portfolio which can include a variety of evidence such as audio, video, images, graphics and documents. It should be updated regularly in preparation for job applications or applying for a training or other learning program.
