

Administration Instructions

Module 3 Writing

Guide to using a hard copy of the On-entry assessment

This booklet enables you to accurately and consistently administer the On-entry tasks without using the online system.

Before administering the assessments, please read the Handbook for principals, teachers and test administrators which contains essential information about the program, the tasks and the changes to the system for 2020.

Administering the assessments

The Administration Instructions included in this booklet contain the same information for each task as the online system, i.e. the resources required, the instructions for administering each question and the text to read aloud to the students. It is important to follow the instructions closely to ensure that each student is provided with the same conditions and opportunities.

The text to read aloud to students appears in a speech bubble. Ensure that the text is read as it appears.

As the online system is interactive, student responses are recorded differently in the hard copy version, i.e. record a tick for correct responses, a cross for incorrect responses and leave blank for questions not attempted. This will ensure that when responses are entered into the system, they are entered accurately.

Recording responses

Download a copy of the blank class report available on the website. Use this to enter students' responses. Ensure that responses are uploaded to the online system prior to the end of Week 6.

Notes

The hard copy version does not provide the capacity to record noteworthy student behaviours observed during the assessments. These behaviours should be noted separately and uploaded to the system when entering student responses.

1. This task should be administered under normal classroom practice. For example:
 - if your students usually have time to plan their writing, you may provide time for them to plan
 - if your students usually draw a picture before they write, they may do this.
2. This is an assessment of the student's ability to write unassisted. Do not model writing or write words from the book on the board.
3. This task can be conducted with the whole class or in small groups.
4. Ensure that Tap Dancing Star reading task has been completed, if relevant.
5. Read Tap Dancing Star to the students.
6. Engage the students in the following discussion, allowing them time to respond and share ideas.

In the story Tap Dancing Star, Li Ling was excited about dancing in the end of year concert. But then, disaster struck! What was the disaster?

She was stung by a bee? How did Li Ling feel about that?

Think about a time when you were looking forward to something special but then disaster struck and you couldn't do what you had been looking forward to.

You might have been looking forward to a party but you got sick and couldn't go, or you were going to go camping with your family but the weather was terrible so you stayed home. How did you feel?

Today you are going to write a story about a time that disaster struck and you couldn't do what you were looking forward to. You can write about something that happened to you or to someone you know, or you can make something up.

7. Allow the students time to discuss their ideas. This can be done as a whole class or in small groups.
8. Distribute paper to the students.

There is a piece of paper on your desk. I would like you to write your name at the top.

Remember to write in sentences and pay attention to your spelling and punctuation.

9. If the student is unable to write their name or if their attempt is unrecognisable, write their name for them.
10. Allow enough time, e.g. 20-30 minutes, for students to complete their writing.
11. Move amongst the students. Encourage students to write their best but do not provide any assistance.
12. If you are unable to read the student's writing, ask them to read it to you. Scribe exactly what they say.
13. Use the On-entry Writing Marking Guide to mark students' writing.
